Maybe a non-profit could oversee it?

Nicole Shearin -- I would like to suggest to look at all the other activities going on out there. The Vet Tech program is one of the best in the state and it give the students a chance to interact with all kinds of animals-- big and small. I personally do dog training and dog behavior work up there along with Kid's K9 camp where kids learn about dog behavior, safety and training. My classes are family events many times since I work with the entire family. Angel Paws animal assisted therapy does testing for therapy dogs to be used in the community in addition to training for this activity.
